Why now?

CARLI libraries are buying fewer books

The decrease in I-Share borrowing also suggests fewer unique print books

The CARLI Collection Management Committee focused on collaboration and conducted a survey to see who was interested in exploring collaboration.

Based on interest, a follow-up webinar was held on May 9, 2016 and archived at: https://www.carli.illinois.edu/carli-print-and-electronic-cooperative-collection-development-options-monographs-ay17

52 libraries responded. 11 were very interested and had time and money to contribute.

Top areas: Health Sciences (10), Business (10), Education (9), Literature (8), Physical Sciences (6), Computer Science/Math (5), Fine Arts (5), Social Sciences (4), History (4)

In FY17 the committee followed-up via phone calls and e-mails with collaboration volunteers.

Girl Mugging for Camera | Lewis University | CARLI Digital Collections

This week's theme is "kids being kids" as we celebrate the beginning of summer break. Although this photo would not look out of place in a contemporary teen's Instagram feed (with a 'ye olde vintage photo' filter applied, naturally), this girl was showing off for the camera circa 1910-1916. Founded in 1910, the National Urban League is one of the oldest African American social service, research, and advocacy organizations in the United States. A group of sociologists, social workers, and philanthropists founded the Chicago League in 1916 to address the rapidly increasing needs of the African American community during a time of voluminous migration. The specific focus of the Chicago League's programs has changed over time from the provision of social services to advocacy and leadership on citywide efforts to open jobs, housing, and public accommodations to black citizens.

How might CARLI help institutions band together to apply for grant money and projects?

How does this project matter in light of the many other preservation resources available online and through other organizations?

Thank you!

Open Access (OA) literature is digital, online, free of charge, and free of most copyright and licensing restrictions.

Open Access by Peter Suber (2012)

The Resource Sharing committee is looking for feedback into the role Open Access plays when filling Interlibrary Loan requests.

1. Does your ILL unit actively utilize Open Access resources when attempting to fill Interlibrary Loan borrowing requests?
    a. What resources do you use when searching for Open Access materials (Google Scholar, Directory of Open Access Journals, PubMed Central . . .)

2. Where in the workflow does this occur?
    a. Are you actively searching for OA availability before searching out other libraries that might fill the request?
    b. Or does it more resemble a search of last resort, before having to cancel a request?

3. Do you actively track ILL requests that are available through Open Access resources? If so, how?

4. When you discover that an article is freely available, is it your practice to fill the request, or direct the patron to the request?
    a. Fill the request and provide link
    b. Fill the request, deliver file, and provide link
    c. Cancel the request and provide link
    d. Cancel the request, deliver file, and provide link

- Baich, T. (2012). Opening interlibrary loan to open access. Interlending and Document Supply, 40 (1). 55-60.
  - Study conducted of the interlibrary loan requests placed by patrons of Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI) during 2010 and 2011 to determine the impact of open access resources on interlibrary loan requests. The article describes the workflow for processing interlibrary loan requests for open access materials using the OCLC ILLiad system. The study concludes that interlibrary loan requests are not likely to decrease with the availability of open access resources because users will still need assistance from librarians to find the materials freely available online.

TECHNICAL SERVICES COMMITTEE

Keith Eiten, Wheaton College

MarcEdit for Database Maintenance: A Select Primer

- MarcEdit is a software product that can be used to edit MARC records (bibliographic and holding)
- It was developed by Terry Reese, head of Digital Initiatives at the Ohio State University Libraries, and available free to all libraries
- He is still actively developing this product

- Its ability to perform changes to single records or groups of records makes it a useful tool

- This ability to perform batch editing means that catalogers have a powerful and time-saving tool to use to enhance and maintain our catalog records

Some background/history

- A few CARLI libraries had been using MarcEdit for past 5-7 years

- Enough interest for CARLI to request Terry Reese to host a series of webinars in Spring 2015

- Now on his website as "MarcEdit 101"

Some background/history

- After the webinars were broadcast, some reactions indicated the need for training materials that provided a clear way forward for beginners/catalogers who only work with MARC as found in OCLC Connexion or Voyager Cataloging Client

- Based on feedback from webinar attendees, and the experiences of TS committee members and colleagues

- A general introduction, with outlines of some (not all) of MarcEdit's features, definitions of Reese's terminology, and a sample workflow

- Step-by-step instructions, with numerous screenshots, showing how to perform two straightforward and common bibliographic maintenance tasks

- Discussion of other projects that could be done easily/well using MarcEdit

- Selection of helps and guides to using MarcEdit

Why does this matter?

- Time-efficient method for bibliographic maintenance tasks

- Tool to move from piecework to batchwork

- Enabling "doing more with less" or dealing with backlogs/new projects

How can this be leveraged for CARLI?

- Accuracy, consistency and richness of bibliographic data across all I-Share library catalogs helps everyone

What's next?

- It takes its place next to the other training materials at CARLI

- We hope it will be of use to non-I-Share libraries

- Could be converted into video format

Thank you!
